

General liability insurance for restaurants covers bodily injury when someone gets sick or injured eating the insured's food as long as the insured is considered negligent in any way as to food preparation.